membership of the Working Group, but GCAB had received no such suggestions. The Board of Jewish Deputies had been that adoption of the definition would signal to students that UCL was taking their concerns seriously.

26.7 Following AB in the spring, a full consultation had also taken place online with every UCL staff member invited to comment. All AB members were advised that the consultation had opened. 133 responses had been received, of which 43% were in favour of adoption, 20% in favour of adoption with modifications, and approximately 20% strongly opposed. Against that background, Council had had its difficult discussion and had made a decision. Council would, however, accept any further input AB wished to make and the outcomes of the Working Group should come through to a future meeting of Council.

26.8 AB was asked for a show of hands on the motion. Both motions were carried.

RESOLVED:

- (1) To advise Council that the adoption of this definition (and any other) of a special instance of racism should be paused until the Academic Board has carried out the

Any attending experts (not voting) that the Working Group chooses to incorporate up to a number of 4.

That the Secretariat issue the call to fill these positions in liaison with the Chair of GCAB.
