

BAME Awarding Gap Case Study

Decolonising Law Public Lectures open to UG students

Ralph Wilde

What did you do/who's involved? What evidence/rationale underpinned your choice ?

I have set up a new interdisciplinary public lecture series, with the much-appreciated organisational support of Lisa Penfold, Events Manager at UCL Laws, on topics concerned with the relationships between law, race, imperialism, colonialism, anti-imperialism and de-/anti-/post-colonialism. The topics address, in different ways, racism, and lecturers include Tendayi Achiume, the UN Special Rapporteur on Racism and Xenophobia, and Mindy Chen Wishart, Dean of Oxford Law Faculty and a prominent voice on twitter on the subject of racism and sexism in universities (#racemetoo).

As a way of raising the profile of my Ph.D. students, Alonso Gurmendi Dunkelberg, who is from Chile, to enhance his career prospects

UCL Laws for her logistical support, Danielle MacFarlane and Jessica Luong for help with publicity, and Alonso Gurmendi Dunkelberg, Ph.D. student at laws, who is acting as host of half the events. And to Professors Alison Diduck and Prince Saprai at Laws, who agreed to and supported the creation of these events
